

We Are Just Travelers

by Breisi Juárez

Without a doubt everyday we improve. Everyday, consciously or unconsciously, we look for comfort and happiness.

If we stop and contemplate the past in all its splendor to the present, are considerable situations. I understand that this world is simple, allows to adorn it, to give it its meaning, but it is also be present with its reality.

I see that some want to eat the world and all the wonders in it. Others want to throw up the world and cease to exist along with everything. Are you aware that now we are just travelers?

We are just travelers and at the end of this journey called life we have to pay a debt called death.

I agree that most situations and decisions depend on perspective. Most think you should nurse hope inside, and enjoy the moment that is the only thing we have for sure. You don't know how much time we have left. The future is uncertain. Enjoy your moment. Enjoy the moment. With those droopy eyelids and that exhausted face, are you enjoying your moment?

